Seminar Report

The Department of Computer Science and IQAC organized a seminar titled “Application of ICT in Teaching-Learning Process” on November 10, 2017. The seminar was held at Room 15 at 3:00 PM. The speaker for the seminar was Dr. Satrajit Ghosh, Principal of Charuchandra College.

Presentation: Application of ICT in Teaching-Learning Process

Dr. Satrajit Ghosh, an esteemed academic and the Principal of Charuchandra College, delivered an insightful presentation on the application of Information and Communication Technology (ICT) in the teaching-learning process.

Dr. Ghosh highlighted the importance of integrating ICT in education, emphasizing its potential to enhance the quality of learning and teaching. He discussed various ICT tools and how they can be effectively used in the classroom to foster interactive and engaging learning experiences.

He also shared examples from his own experience as an educator, demonstrating the transformative impact of ICT on student engagement and learning outcomes. His presentation sparked a lively discussion among the attendees about the challenges and opportunities of implementing ICT in their own teaching practices.

Conclusion

The seminar was a great success, providing valuable insights into the application of ICT in the teaching-learning process. Dr. Ghosh’s presentation was particularly enlightening, offering practical strategies for integrating ICT in education. The attendees appreciated the opportunity to learn from Dr. Ghosh’s expertise and experience, and left the seminar with a deeper understanding of the potential of ICT to enhance teaching and learning.
