BRECHT BROCHT

The Struggle of Brecht's life:
 Bertolt Brecht was one of the most influential playwrights of 20th century. He wrote "The Threepenny Opera" (1928) with Kurt Weill, "Mother Courage and Her Children" (1941), "The Good Person of Szechwan" (1943). Brecht was born in Augsburg, Bavaria. In 1933, and the rise of Hitler, he directly affected his life and work. He was working when he was a student. After military service during World War I, he abandoned medical studies to pursue writing and the theatre.

A member of the Workers' Communist Party, Brecht wrote Marxist criticism for a socialist newspaper from 1919 to 1921. His plays were banned in Germany in the 1930s and in 1933 he went into exile first in Denmark and then Finland. Brecht finally died in 1956. He is famous for his plays and operas.
